

ARCTIC ADVENTURE

NATURAL EXPLORATION AREA

- We have lots of different textures and shades of white and blue material to represent snow and ice.
- We have our foil blanket, which is a fabulous tummy time activity and offers lots of opportunity for sensory play for baby
- We have Arctic soft toys – different textures, shapes and sizes for visual stimulation.
- Glitter bottles - made at one of our previous Adventure sessions
- We have hand puppets for parental interaction and visual stimulation.
- We have Snowballs (Scrunchies) and Icebergs (scurers and bowls) – offering interesting shapes and textures.
- We have books....That's Not My.....
- White and Blue balloons can be used for tummy time and visual stimulation
- We have our Snowflake Mobile - if you have older siblings, get them to help you make one - they will love making something for baby!
- We have kitchen items - scourers, wire wool, sponges, which offer great textures for baby to explore
- We have large penguin inflatables
- We have polar bears, seals, sharks, mermaids, penguins
- If you are at home, use some real ice to show baby the meaning of 'cold', or other items from the freezer
